SUMMARY

Demographic, social and economic diversity of the first year students of selected departments of the university of Rzeszów

Demographic, social and economic diversity may be observed in every kind of environment. This study compares results of a questionnaire survey involving 485 male and female students of selected departments of the University of Rzeszów. The research was conducted during the winter semester of 2010/2011. The study analyses the social background of the young people, their education, profession, the age of parents, and the number of brothers and sisters. The results are presented in the form of graphs.
